Developing Skills Related to Work and Social Life For Graduate Students, Mahidol University

Background

It is widely accepted that students need more than the knowledge gained from studying in the classroom in order to be successful in work. Development of work-related skills and living in a society known as soft skills is equally important.

Faculty of Graduate Studies, Mahidol University realizes on this importance and has begun to require graduate students to develop skills called soft skills that will be useful for work and living in a society since 2016 apart from studying courses in the curriculum and has continuously developed such skills in the form of activities that each student must attend by themselves and soft skill online activities in order that students can access various channels as needed.

Currently, Faculty of Graduate Studies has set up the required skills for graduate students consisting of 6 skills which are

1. Communication and Language Skills is the development of communication skills both in recognition and presentation by including the presentation of concepts, presentation of attentive, listening, and understanding cross-cultural communication, but it does not include the development of language skills contained in courses or for thesis, or the Thai knowledge enhancement project. However, the additional language should be focused on actual use i.e., speaking, listening, or writing, and developing the ability to communicate in various ways including speaking, writing, or presenting, using various media.

2. Leadership and Management Skills is to develop leadership skills for students, such as leadership and follower development, teamwork, problem solving, negotiation, personality development and social etiquette, motivation techniques, and management skill development in various fields both in personal life and work.

3. Digital Literacy Skills is the development of skills using digital tools and technology, such as computers, phones, tablets, online media programs for data storage to analyze and synthesize data and create public relations media with efficient online cooperation for security. However, it does not include training for information systems related to thesis, such as Turnitin, EndNote, and SPSS, which is a basic activity that must be offered for students as a part of the courses.
4. Creative and Innovative Skills is the ability to think open-minded and to creatively enhance the value to ideas leading to the improvement of creative work development or new things beneficial to oneself and society, such as creating a crisis as an opportunity, developing or fabricating new products, services, or useful processes leading to the research development in to society.

5. Health Literacy Skills is a skill development of good health. It is the development of learning, seeking and communicating health information, integrating health information as well as practical applications for maintaining health, building self-care skills, receiving illness, severity, and incurrent disease, and foresting possible health risks.

6. Entrepreneurial Literacy Skills is the development of entrepreneurial skills, learning, entrepreneurship development through the practice and application of finance, economy, and business for living, as well as considering economic options, planning for investments, and using entrepreneurial skills to create productivity to upgrade and be a career option.

To process skill development activities, it can be divided into 2 categories as follows:

1. Activities provided by Faculty of Graduate Studies are projects or activities that allow all graduate students to participate. Students can see the list of activities and register to participate in the online activities and check the participation in the student profile after 5 official days via www.graduate.mahidol.ac.th/softskills/. Students do not need to submit any evidence as Faculty of Graduate Studies will automatically record attendance. By participating in one activity provided by Faculty to Graduate Studies, students will join not more than 2 skills related to work and social life.
